

New leader for Slow Food movement in the county

A NEW leader has been chosen for Slow Food Cornwall.

Katy Davidson was elected at the convivium's first AGM. She joined Slow Food Cornwall's committee last year and was voted in at Camel Valley Vineyard in a meeting hosted by former leader Bob Lindo.

He said: "I am delighted to hand over the reins of Slow Food Cornwall to my erstwhile deputy leader. Membership has grown to 75 in a very short period and it's great to have a young, enthusiastic and capable person to take on the challenges of consolidation and further growth."

Katy added: "I hope to continue the work which has seen Slow Food Cornwall grow to be the sixth largest convivium in England in a very short time."

Next up is a fundraising dinner at the Eden Project on June 3. Katy, of Newquay, works at Sands Resort Hotel in Porth. To learn more about Slow Food check out slowfoodcornwall.com
